

Word Clouds of Care

This lesson has students define rumors and gossip and explore how they experience these in their everyday life. The lesson gives students an opportunity to have a good discussion on what rumors and gossip are, how they feel when engaged with that kind of talk, and how they can stand up for themselves and others in an assertive yet caring and respectful manner. The final activity gives students a chance to affirm one another in ways that will remind them of their specialness and connection, which will hopefully help kids think twice before spreading gossip or rumors about their classmates.

Lesson Objective

Students will:

- Identify rumors and gossip.
- Reflect on ways they can respond when they hear information that is untrue or unkind.

Teacher Connection/Self-Care

What do you do for YOU each day? Choose something just for you today. Take a hot shower. Turn on your favorite song on the drive home. You matter.

Tips for Diverse Learners

- Drawing a gossip diagram on the board that shows how rumors spread. For example, you could draw stick figures of two people talking about a third and what happens.
- Another option would be to create laminated figures that you could use to illustrate points during the discussion.

Share

3-5 minutes

Can anyone tell us what a rumor is and what gossiping means?

Have a few students share their ideas with the class. Consider jotting notes on the whiteboard or type them up on the smart board for visual learners.

If you have ever been a part of a group that spreads a rumor or shared gossip, how did it make you feel?

You may receive a variety of responses here; guide students to the idea that spreading rumors or gossiping may make them feel connected or “cool” for a while, but ultimately, it makes us feel bad because we know we have treated another person badly.

If you have ever had a rumor or piece of gossip spoken about you, how did it make you feel?

Good! We will talk more about this throughout the lesson, but spreading rumors or sharing gossip is not how we care for others or for ourselves.

Review or share the definition of caring: feeling and showing concern for others.

Telephone Game

5-7 minutes

We are going to start with a game of telephone. I want you all to sit in a circle. I will choose one person to go first and that person will think of a phrase or sentence. Whisper that phrase to the person sitting next to you. Then whisper it to the next person and so on until the last person has heard the phrase or sentence. The last person says the phrase or sentence out loud.

Do the activity. Then ask the following questions:

- Ask the person who went first if that was their phrase. Did anything change?
- Why do you think it changed?
- Do you think this can happen in real life? In what way?

As we saw from this activity, it can be easy to get something wrong when we communicate. Now this was a game so it didn't really matter. But what would happen if you told someone a story and they told someone else but forgot some important facts or changed them on purpose? How would you feel? That is how rumors and gossip get started.

Allow students time to respond.

(10 min)

Then ask any of the following questions:

- How did Bailey gossip about the other students?
- Were her words the truth?
- Why did everyone get so upset?
- Why do you think Bailey constantly gossiped about others even after Maya asked her to stop?
- When you hear gossip or a rumor, how can you show respect and care for the person talking and also the person who is being talked about?
- What can you do if you hear gossip or rumors? How can you be assertive in that situation? Define assertive.

Word Cloud of Care

For this activity, everyone gets a sheet of white paper (preferably cardstock or construction paper; something that will hold up). Have students cut the edges so they are rounded like a fluffy cloud. Have students write their own name in the center in large letters. Collectively, the class is going to make a word cloud for each other of the positive qualities they admire or appreciate about the person whose name is in the middle. Students pass their word clouds around in a line (so it's organized) and students write down one or two words that represent something they respect or admire about the person. Through this, we remind ourselves that every person is special and has positive qualities. Hang the word clouds around the room or from the ceiling using string. Encourage students to remember these clouds whenever they hear gossip or rumors; they should think about how each person matters and how they can use these positive qualities to show respect and caring toward one another.

Reflect

5-7 minutes or longer if you have students answer one or more of the following questions; these could be used as a group discussion, too.

Gossip and rumors can be very hurtful and are often untrue. If you need to know if the rumor is true, ask the person directly. How many of you think you can do that?

Invite students to raise their hands.

Spreading rumors and gossiping about others is not a kind way to treat people. Kindness comes from treating all people with respect. Are there any questions?

Optional:

To gauge understanding of the material, choose from either the evaluation or reflection questions as discussion, writing, or journal prompts. Consider providing additional time for deeper evaluation and reflection as needed.

Evaluation Questions

- What is gossip? What is a rumor?
- Why can gossip and rumors be hurtful?
- What is a respectful and caring way to react if you hear gossip or a rumor?

Reflection

- Write about a time when you or someone you know gossiped or told a rumor about you or someone you know. How did it make you feel? What did you do?
- How can we stop people from spreading rumors?
- How can you respect yourself and be assertive if someone tells a rumor about you?

Extension Ideas

- Do a role play (or send home to do with parents/guardians) acting out situations in front of the class. Here are some options:
 - Brian comes up to you at recess and says that he heard that your friend Dax still sleeps with a stuffed animal and blanket. Then Brian laughs. What do you do?
 - Sami is sitting behind you at lunch. You hear her lean over to Maya, who is sitting next to her, and whisper something about your outfit (which was brand new and that you had purchased with your birthday money). What do you do?
- Have students make response posters to convey words and strategies they can use when confronted with rumors or gossip. Hang these around the room for constant reinforcement.
